Feedback

Feedback in school may take a variety of forms. The adult will usually formally mark individual written assignments and maths exercises. Alternatively, children may be involved in marking their own work alongside the teacher, when this is appropriate. At other times, feedback may be given during class work, for example in a class discussion, or through tables or spelling tests. When homework is of a more open-ended nature, such as research for topic work in history or geography, pupils will sometimes be asked to review their own work in small groups or prepare a presentation. Good work may be rewarded with one of the following awards: certificates, stamps, stickers and stars. Teachers will not mark homework that is handed in late.

Pupils who fail to complete homework

All pupils are expected to complete homework on time. Teachers will keep records of pupils completing homework which will be regularly checked. If pupils consistently fail to complete homework, teachers will contact parents to find out why and their child may be asked to complete their homework during break, lunchtime or Golden Time.

Absences

If the child is absent from school due to short term illness or medical reasons, the school will not supply work for these periods as pupils should not be well enough to undertake work. In some cases, there may be exceptions to this rule and the school has the right to decide whether this is acceptable or not.

If the child is absent for a long period of time, e.g. with a broken arm, the teacher and the parent of the child will agree on what should be done and how much help should be given to the child.
