

Attendance in the Early Years Matters!

“Even when you are very small, good attendance makes a BIG difference”

Supports the development of early language and communication skills.

Play is incredibly important to children’s development and is how children learn!

It supports the development of social and emotional skills, which are required to make and maintain friendships.

Expands a child’s world, feeding their curiosity.

Helps to build and support good habits for school and future learning.

Attendance in the early years can support early identification of emerging needs. So appropriate support can be put in place sooner.

Research shows that children with good early years attendance perform better at the end of reception than their peers.

It’s lots of FUN!
